

CINDERELLA HAD NO BALL SLIPPERS

"Borrowed" a Boarder's Satin Ones, but Magistrate Sets Her Free.

Cinderella, in spangled gown and with a dainty gilded wand, brightened up the Harlem Court to-day. She was a dusky Cinderella, and, since no god-mother had given her glass slippers, she had taken satin slippers that belonged to another girl. Hence Cinderella in court. On days when the colored society of Harlem isn't having a grand masquerade ball she is Miss Connie Craft, eighteen years old, a comely mulatto girl employed as a maid at the boarding-house of Mrs. Matilda Howard, 121 West One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street.

She was invited to a masquerade last night and prepared to go as Cinderella. She had the dress out to show her plump, curly-haired shoulders. But she had forgotten to get the most important part of the costume—the slippers. In her work as housemaid she knew that one of Mrs. Howard's boarders had champagne-colored satin slippers. So Cinderella took them.

Before she went she showed her costume to Sophie Johnson, another colored maid. Sophie had received no invitation and that may have been why she told Mrs. Howard of the slipper incident. When Connie returned at 10 o'clock this morning she found Mrs. Howard and Sophie waiting for her. She was wearing street shoes, but they threw her on the floor, as they admitted in court, and found the satin slippers hidden in her stockings. Then they called a policeman and Connie weeping and lamenting was taken to a cell in the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street station. In court she said tearfully:

"To Homer, I just borrowed 'em. Magistrate Crane seemed touched. 'It's a shame,' he said. 'This poor girl wanted to look her best at the ball. She shouldn't have been arrested on any such charge. She's not to blame. Declared.'"

Society Women Tipplers Are Growing Numerous.

Managers of Fashionable Hotels and Restaurants Admit Truth in the Charge.

Rev. Madison C. Peters's startling remarks on "Inebriety Among Society Women" in his address at the people's meeting in Epiphany Baptist Church was either silently acquiesced in or qualified by the managers and waiters of New York's biggest restaurants. The few denials given the allegations were merely denunciations of the clergyman who made the sensational charges.

The declaration has often been made that New York society women drink as a class, but never has such a charge of wholesale tipping been brought against the Fifth Avenue set by one so qualified to speak on their faults. If nine women out of every ten drink there is cause for Dr. Peters's alarming warning: "The fashionables of this city are establishing a custom which is being followed by millions of American women to the detriment of the race."

By "the fashionable drinking places of our city," Dr. Peters referred to the restaurants and hotels where the members of the Four Hundred and other social strivers dine and wine and to the heads of these places was put the question: "Is this statement of Dr. Peters true?" The answers were in the main evasions or qualified acquiescence. At Revere's the most unqualified denial and denunciation was made by the head waiter, who said:

Overdrawn, They Say.

"Such reckless statement is an insult to the ladies of this city. The minister who said that should be in better business. He is trying to advertise himself. The whole statement is overdrawn." Manager Garnier, of Delmonico's, is said: "What can one in this position say? This statement is too strong, it is overdrawn. Of course women do drink, as he says—some women—but not to such great extent. As this minister put it, it is too strong."

"Our guests exercise personal desires, and there are as many who never order drinks as there are those who do. It is all a personal matter, anyway, and not to be spoken of in this general manner. I merely would repeat that Dr. Peters's charge is very much overdrawn."

The head waiter of the restaurant on the north side of the Hotel Astor positively side-stepped this question and said:

"I may be here but I do not see it. For one in my position it is best not to see it. It may be true or not true. That is not for us to trouble with."

"Then you will not deny it in any degree?" was asked.

"No, it may or may not be. But I do not see it," was the smiling reply.

Draw Line at "Intox." At Martin's, the assistant manager, M. Duero, smiled satirically at the clergyman's charge. "No woman is ever intoxicated," he said. "When a lady and gentleman take luncheon or dinner here they usually wish a bottle of wine, but never has a woman become intoxicated here."

"And as to women drinking with other women, or alone?"

"I wouldn't care to answer that."

At the Waldorf-Astoria, famed the world over for its cellar goods for both sexes, "Mr. Oscar," the head waiter, treated the matter as a personal affront. In the voice he uses to scare the knifing boy he said:

"Nothing to say. My business is to look after guests' wants what they drink."

"You don't deny it?"

"I will say nothing."

An example of the breaking down of social barriers this spreading custom of drinking among women is responsible for is shown in the following vicious story, vouched for by a young woman:

Five young women took luncheon at a famous high-priced restaurant in the financial district. All five ordered cocktails before luncheon. This was the sole act of misconduct upon which the head waiter, an old little Frenchman, presumed to approach and shirkingly inquire:

"Cocktails, all right, girls?"

Heat Costs Nothing when you use the "New Light" GAS-JET GENERATOR.

It's IN THE GENERATOR. The GENERATOR concentrates and intensifies the waste heat of your burner. By a scientific principle of construction the heat is sent to the floor instead of the ceiling. The illuminating power of the gas is increased by the GENERATOR—instead of being diminished—increased 50 per cent. Not a foot more gas is consumed for heat and light. Can be attached to any burner.
